++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Some drizzle at first, turning windy and showery later tonight.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloudy this evening with some drizzle in the south. This soon clears as scattered showers spread from the northwest. The showers will become heavy in places and will turn wintry over the highest ground by morning, with strong winds developing. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Saturday:
A day of sunshine and showers, some heavy with hail, and it will be cold enough for snow over the higher mountains. Feeling cold in the blustery northwesterly winds. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Drier and sunnier Sunday and still rather windy. Rain and hill snow Monday, clearing to showers later. Gales or severe gales possible on Tuesday, with rain followed by squally showers.
